A Few of the More Practical Ways of Fastening Wood Letters to Sign Boards, Brick Walls, Iron Facade, Glass, Wire, etc.

No. 1 shows the number and most appropriate place to put the finishing nails, when attaching letters to board signs.

No. 2 shows the letter fastened to the sign by use of a screw from back of the sign. In this case letters are laid on the sign and outlined, then the holes are bored and screws driven in from the back of the sign, into the letter.

No. 3 shows about the size and angle of the finishing nail. One shows the nail left flush with the face of the letter, and the other shows the nail set and the hole puttied. It is thought quite advisable to leave the nail flush with the face of the letter.

No. 4 shows the letter fastened to cement or iron facade, by small strips of galvanized iron or brass plates, same being attached to the letter by the use of screws. The other end is fastened to the wall by screw or expansion bolt. The face of the strip is then painted to correspond with the color of the background.

No. 5 shows letters fastened to the wire by the use of ordinary blind staples. Heavy galvanized staples can be used for large letters.

No. 6 shows the letter fastened to brick wall or stone with ordinary sign hold-fast.

No. 7 shows large wood letters fastened to the wire by strips of galvanized iron. It is thought advisable to use this method when letters are very large.

No. 8 shows letters fastened to fine mesh screen. The letters are attached by using a little glue and a few very small black head tacks.

Nos. 9 and 10 show method of fastening large letters and wire signs to the roof.

No. 11 shows the letters fastened to the brick or stone wall by strips of angle iron. The angle iron is first attached to the wall by screws or the ordinary sign hold fasts, then the letters are placed between and attached as cut shows.

Wood Letters Attached to Glass for Numerals, Office Doors, Show Windows, etc.

Owing to the possibility of their originality, they are preferred to the glass, enamel or metal letters, and are attached to the glass in a similar manner. Letters can be made from your own designs, or from our regular stock patterns at the same time. Usual thickness, from 1/4 to 3/8 inch.

Before attaching the letters to the glass, same should be well painted, and then allowed to dry thoroughly. If they are placed on windows which are frequently washed, it is advisable to coat them with a good quality of outside or spar varnish.

Directions for Making Cement

Mix Litharge and Glycerine to a suitable putty. Apply to the letter, place same on the window, work it up and down, pressing closely to exclude the air and secure a good adhesion. Press the cement out so that the edges will be protected. If it is deemed necessary, when cement is firmly set, apply the varnish.

WIRE ROOF SIGNS

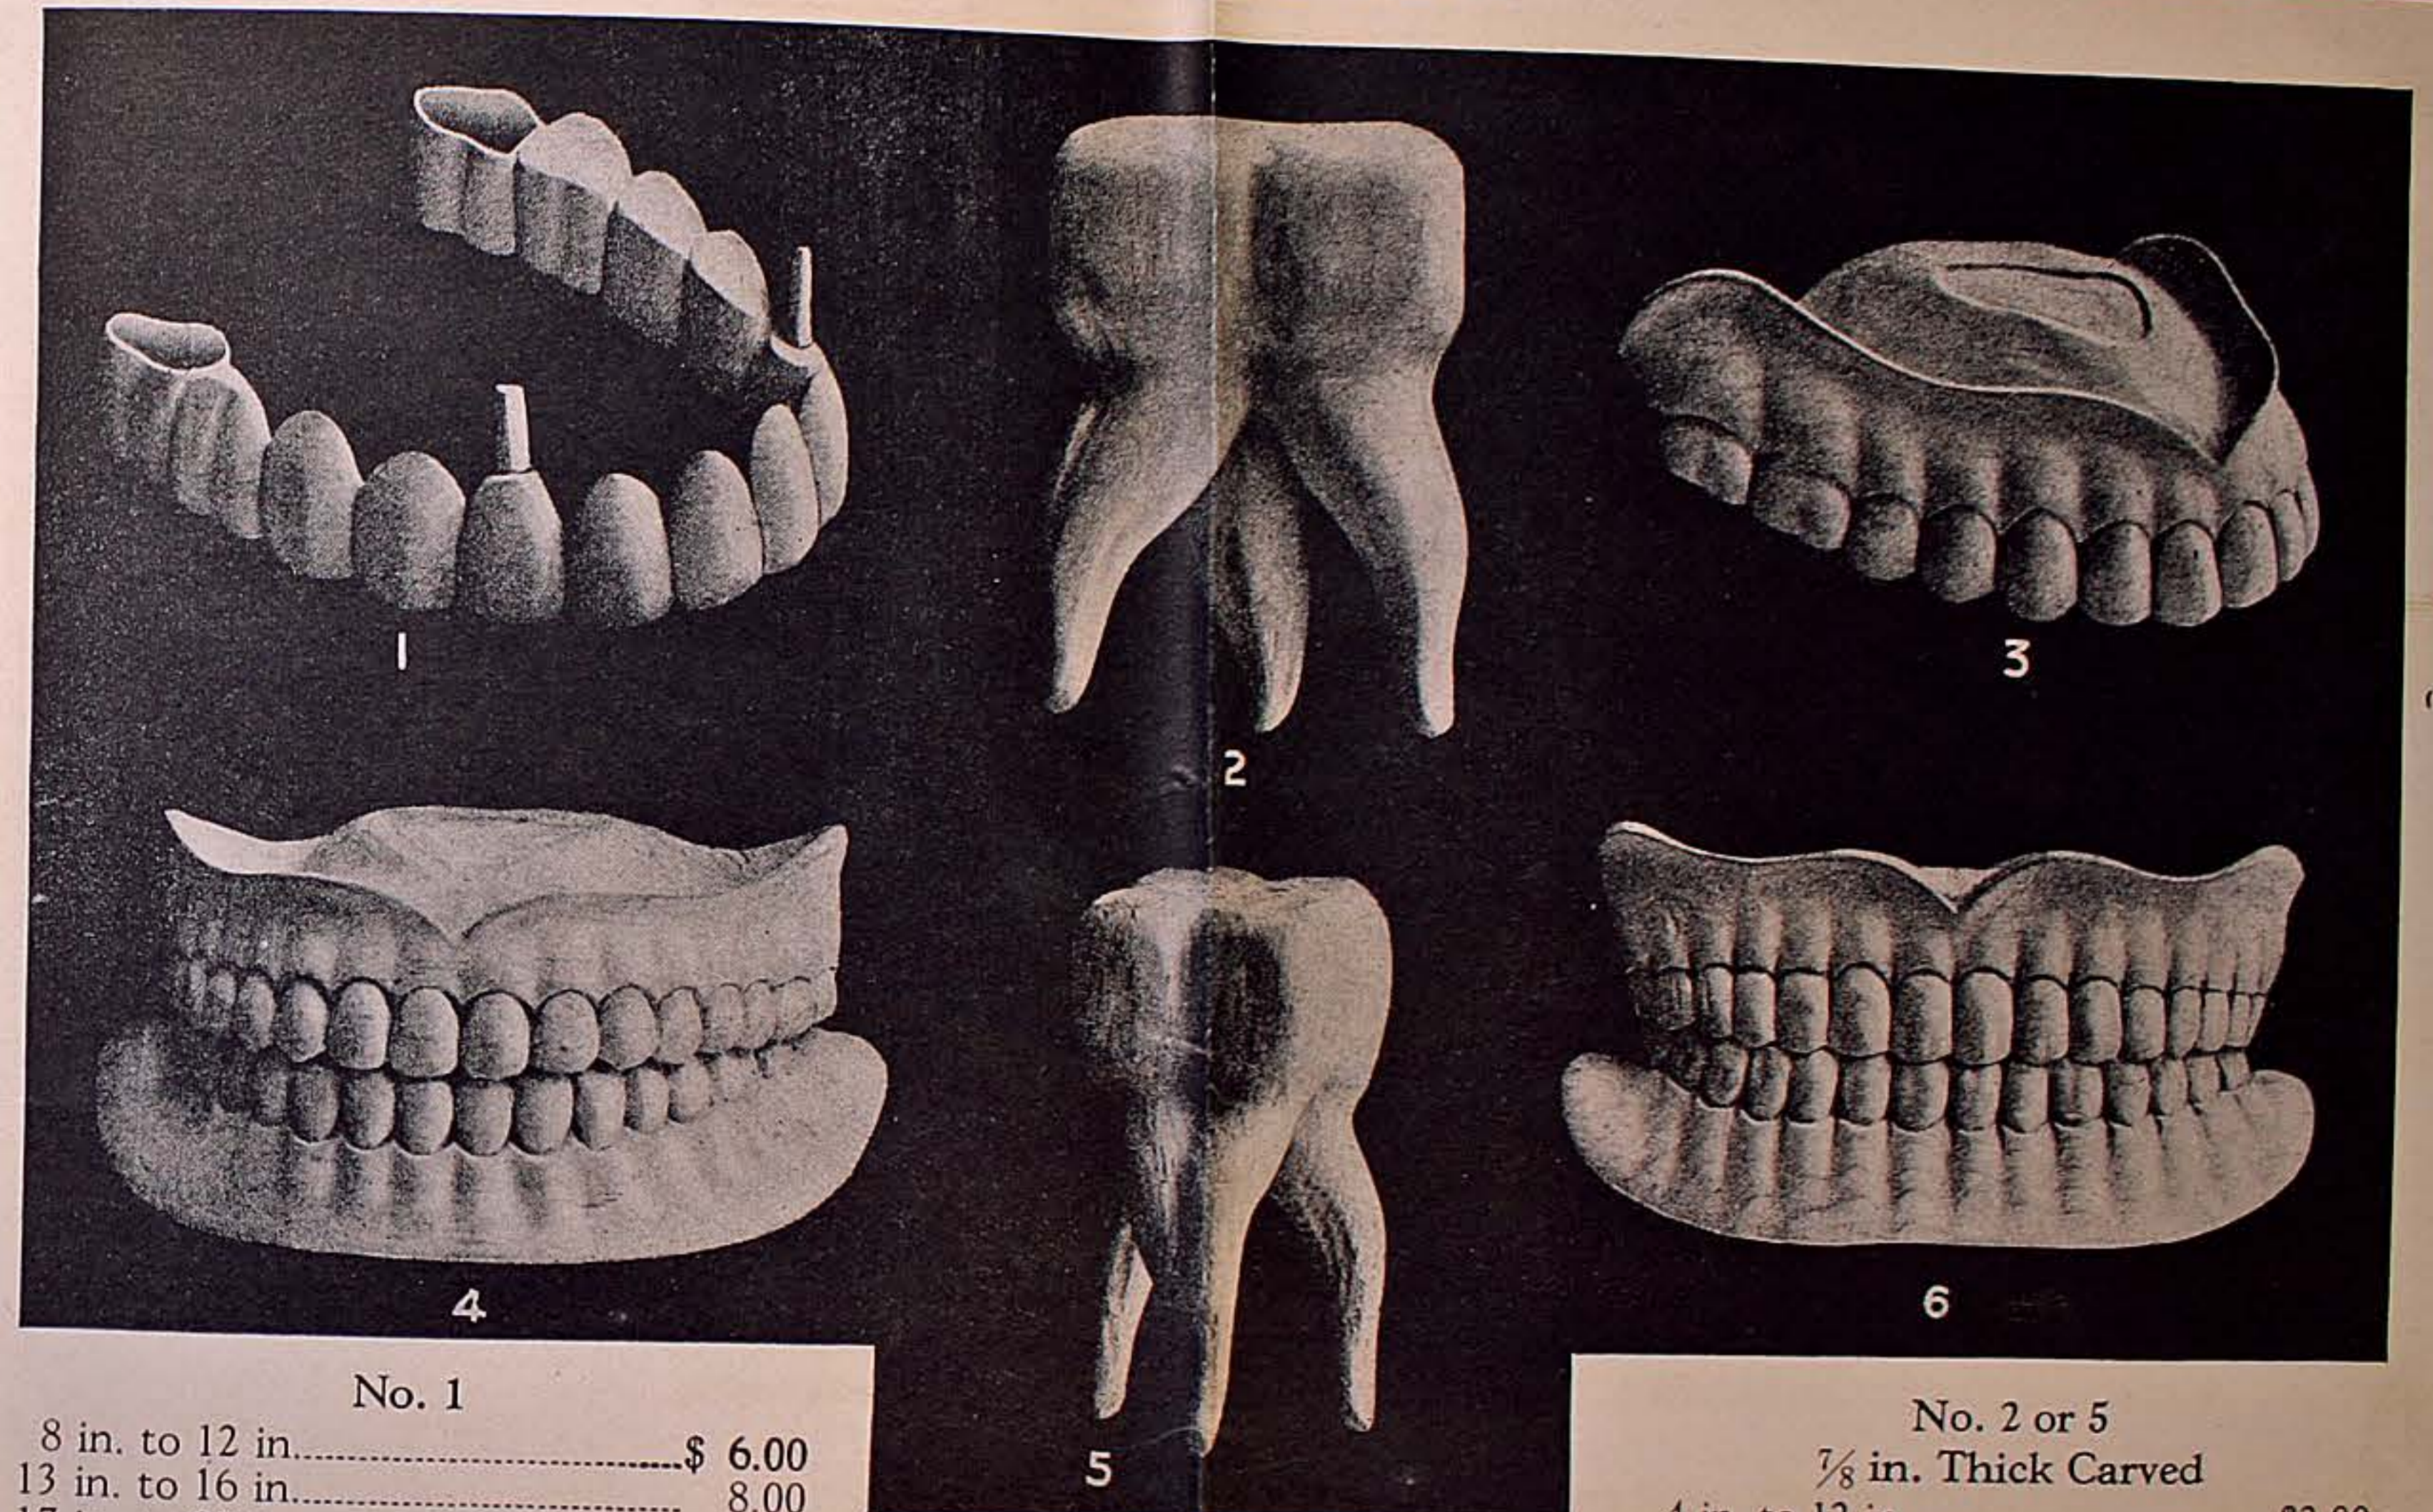

FACTS REGARDING THE DURABILITY OF WOOD LETTERS.

Singer Sewing Machines, erected in Elizabethport, in 1899. Letters 10 feet high, made of two thicknesses of 1 1/4 inch material, with a 3-inch bevel on face. Can be seen today for miles around and are apparently in good condition.

First National Bank, erected in New York City, about 1902.

Murphy Varnish Company, erected in Newark, N. J., in 1907. Letters 3 and 4 feet high, made of 1 1/4-inch material. Also in perfect condition.

Kellner Bros., erected at 15th Street and 6th Avenue. New York City. This sign has the distinction of being the first job of large letters manufactured by Spanjer Bros. in 1897 and was examined just as this catalog went to press and found to be still giving Service.
